Vote, but Goes Through When Amended by Vote of 49 to 29.

Washington, Aug. 2.—The senate passed the Underwood farmers' free list bill after it had been amended on motion of Senator Kern of Indiana, to provide that meats and meat products and cereal products shall be admitted free of duty only from those countries with which the United States has a reciprocal trade agreement admitting farm products free.

This amendment limits the free trade in meats and cereal products therefore to Canada. It was the price of the support of Senator Bailey and a few of his Democratic friends and of the insurgent Republicans.

The bill also provides for a few other amendments, including one by Mr. Eshelby of Indiana adding binders. This was added on the theory that the word "harvesters" in the free list might not apply to what are known as self-binders. Another amendment by Senator Gronna struck out of the free list bill a qualification of the leather schedule embraced in the following words, applying to leather and leather products:

"Made wholly or in chief value of leather, made from cattle hides and cattle skins of whatever weight of cattle of the bovine species, including calf skins." The Gronna amendment put leather and leather products unconditionally on the free list.

Another amendment by Mr. Gronna put upon the free list, "Roman, Portland and other hydraulic cement and lime."

The house free list bill was lost by a vote of 39 to 59, Bailey of Texas voting in the negative. A motion was then made to reconsider by LaFollette and this prevailed and after the adoption of the current amendments the bill was passed 49 to 29.

After the passage of the free list bill the senate took up the reapportionment bill and made it the unfinished business.

TO BATHE.

Chillicothe, Ohio, August 2.—Angry because the jailer had forcibly given him a bath with a hose, John Tarsans, a negro, today attempted to kill himself by cutting his throat with the handle of a rusty cup. Hygienic reasons required that Tarsans be bathed. He objected to such sanitation and the jailer used a water hose and brush.

Tarsans told the jailer he was going to "get even."

"I ain't used to this sort of thing," he said, "I'm going to kill myself."

He was found later on the floor of his cell with his throat cut, but will recover.

CHORUS SINGS.Mr. Kerr in Three Groups of Songs
Much Appreciated—Misses Owen and Lowden Play Admirably.

The splendid series of summer concerts which the director of the Normal conservatory, Professor Frederick Alexander, has put on through the summer school, came to a close Tuesday afternoon with a program given by Mr. William A. Kerr, baritone, of Detroit, Miss Abba Owen, violinist, and Miss Alice M. Lowden, pianist. The chorus consisted of seventy-five women's voices, and after only four or five weeks of drilling together, they presented, under the gifted conducting of Professor Alexander, an array of numbers which would have done credit to a much older organization.

Mr. Kerr has become extremely popular in Ypsilanti and appeared in three delightful groups of songs. The trios for piano, violin and organ, as played by Miss Lowden, Miss Owen and Professor Alexander, were charming.

There was a large attendance at this, as at the other concerts in the series.

CLEVER TRICK TRAPS ALLEGED EMBEZZLER

Detroit, August 2.—George Pavlichek, aged 18, a laborer from Hannibal, Mo., was arrested yesterday afternoon by Detectives Parker and Wilson. Word had been received from Hannibal by the detectives to look out for him as he was due to pass through Detroit on a train for Buffalo.

The detectives were unable to obtain any description of the man except that he had light hair. An ingenious device was used to trap him. One of the detectives went through the train holding a telegram in his hand and calling the man's name. As soon as Pavlichek heard the name he jumped up for the message and was arrested.

He is wanted in Hannibal for embezzling $700, it is said. At first he denied any knowledge of the affair, but when brought to the station admitted the whole affair, the police state. He said that he was given pay checks for the employees of a cement company in Hannibal where he worked and was told to cash them. This he did, took the money and started to Buffalo. He said that he intended to spend the money and then get a job and pay it back. He will be taken back to Hannibal today.

REPAIRS IN ANN ARBOR AND FALLEN TREE IN YPSI CAUSE DELAYS

The badly impaired service on the D., J. & C. road of late, which has resulted, as many have experienced, in broken appointments and much inconvenience, is caused, the Press is informed by the company, by the fact that Packard street in Ann Arbor is being repaved, and the trolley road is obliged to pass along on temporary tracks at the side of the road. This, it is said, accounts for certain cars not making their accustomed trips.

The traffic was also delayed Tuesday afternoon for some time by reason of a tree falling over the wires on Cross street near the corner of Hamilton.

BY FATE.

Battle Creek, August 2.—Within an hour today Fred Manning, foreman for the Wheelock Roofing Co., received two death messages. From Owosso came word that his mother had died suddenly. The old couple had often expressed a wish to die together.

WOULD HAVE TROUSERS
FOR GIRLS—WOMEN CHEER

Battle Creek, August 2.—Women attendants at the local chautauqua today were somewhat shocked at the suggestion of Dr. H. S. Curtis, late of Washington, D. C., where he had headquarters as secretary of the Playground Association of America. The suggestion was that all girls should be compelled to wear trousers until they were 13 or 14 years old. Otherwise, argued Dr. Curtis, they would not get freedom of movement, and could not play base ball and climb trees, "which they are entitled to do." Dr. Curtis would have no skirts, embroidery or novels for growing girls, up to the ages mentioned. The hundreds of women present cheered him.

BURIED, BUT ALIVE

YOUNG MAN CAUGHT IN MINE 85

Water to His Armpits—Begs
Rescuers to Hurry

Joplin, Mo., August 2.—Joseph Clary the miner entombed since Sunday morning in a mine drift 85 feet below ground, was taken out alive this morning. Despite his terrible experience he will survive.

Joplin, Mo., Aug. 2.—Joseph Clary is alive in the drift of the White Oak mine, in which he was entombed by a cave-in Sunday morning. His life is in danger, however. Slowly the water is rising in the drift and unless the rescuing party reaches him soon or the pumping in surrounding mines keeps the water from rising, he will drown.

When the rescuers announced that the drift hole, five inches in diameter, had at last penetrated the drifts, a shout went up from the hundreds who had gathered about the mouth of the mine.

"I'm awfully hungry," Clary called up, "and the water is rising. For God's sake hurry the shaft."

Food and drink were immediately lowered in a small can and relays of men, working with feverish haste, began with renewed vigor the task of sinking the big shaft to the man imprisoned 85 feet below the ground. Clary said he had to move through water to his armpits to reach the drift hole.

Clary is 32 years old, the son of a pioneer mine operator of this city. He and three other miners were in the White Oak lead and zinc mine Sunday when the walls of the shaft began to slide. The other three men, taking warning, escaped before the cave in, but Clary was imprisoned.

Aware of the presence near Clary's positions of a drift sheltered by a ledge rock, mine officials immediately began rescue work in this drift, where he might live, several days.

PROFESSOR BRANDER MATTHEWS, AUTHOR, CRITIC, SPELLING REFORMER.

AN extraordinarily active man is Brander Matthews, professor of dramatic literature in Columbia university. Professor Matthews has tried his hand with considerable success in various lines of writing, but perhaps his literary criticisms are the most notable of his productions. He has written many interesting stories and been a collaborator in the authorship of several comedies. He was one of the organizers of the American Copyright league and the first chairman of the simplified spelling board. Professor Matthews is an enthusiast in his advocacy of spelling English words more nearly as they sound. He is a native of New Orleans.

NEW PEST HOUSE USELESS

No Water Available for Battle Creek's
Fine Building.

Battle Creek, Mich., Aug. 2.—Battle Creek has a splendid new detention hospital, beautifully situated on the hills overlooking Spring lake, but it cannot be used. Not a cent was spared in its erection, but now that it is completed it is discovered that there is no water available.

Only by grading down Fremont street far beyond the point where the last residence is located, and then installing a water main, can the hospital be reached. So the doors of the fine building are locked and a frame structure generally referred to as the "pest house" is being used.

GOOD THOUGHTS
FOR TEACHERSSTUDENTS PROFIT BY TALKS
DELIVERED BY DR. FIND-
LAY AT NORMAL.STRONG LECTURES EACH AFTER-NOON AND EVENING ARE CLOSELY RELATED—CONTAIN
MANY HELPFUL SUGGESTIONS.Relation of the Father and Mother to the School Will be Topic for This Evening—Also Talk
To Scouts.

"The musical name of 'Ypsilanti' lingered in his memory." This was his statement of Dr. G. Findlay of Cambridge, England, who began a series of addresses before the summer normal on Monday. He had heard of Ypsilanti in 1894 and its musical name has since lingered in his memory.

Dr. Findlay delivered interesting addresses Tuesday afternoon and evening. His talks were practical and well received by the audience privileged to hear him. Each lecture is related to the one following as well as preceding in a manner to make the series unusually helpful as a whole and a number of teachers are realizing the splendid thoughts being brought out by him both in his afternoon and evening talks.

"The Community Life of the School," was the subject of Monday evening's lecture at Normal hall. After speaking of the almost universal practice of joining clubs, he said that the school to a child is his club. It is here he meets his comrades, and this is a larger interest to him than the lessons, about which he thinks little and the adult thinks too much. The object of society is to keep going the organizations already existing, and to maintain convention and freedom. This freedom to the child is absolutely necessary, Dr. Findlay stated. "He is to take our place sometime," he said. "We must train him so that he will be ready. Yet freedom is carried too far when it becomes license." The lecturer said that we must be slow about laying down laws for the child, but quick to direct him and to sympathize with him.

The child really belongs to several societies,—to the family and the school among others. Dr. Findlay stated that in his opinion there should be great segregation in several particulars. The children of five and ten years should be trained apart. Defective children should be treated separately from normal children, and there should be adopted more generally in this country that which has been carried almost to excess in England, the segregation of precocious children that they may be taught by themselves. Also Dr. Findlay thought the segregation of sexes advisable.

"The Relation of Father and Mother to the School," will be the topic for Wednesday evening, and he will also speak of the English boy scouts on that occasion.

YPSILANTI VICTIMS OF WRECK REPORTED
IN SERIOUS CONDITION

The condition of both Mr. and Mrs. William Tupper, who are lying in Harper's hospital as a result of the Dearborn wreck on the D., J. & C., is exceedingly serious.

Mr. Tupper is an Odd Fellow, and Frank Crippen of this city, also an Odd Fellow, went into Detroit Monday to inquire for Mr. and Mrs. Tupper. The clerk in the hospital office said that they were coming on nicely, as well as could be expected. But, when Mr. Crippen expressed a desire to see them and explained that he and Mr. Tupper were Odd Fellows and he had come to Detroit on this mission from the order, the clerk summoned the physician who is in attendance on Mr. and Mrs. Tupper, and he frankly admitted that their condition was extremely grave. Not even their son, Dr. Louis Tupper, of Redfield, has been allowed to see them, it was understood. Mr. Tupper, it was found, upon examination, had his collar bone broken, likewise three ribs and a leg and an arm. Curiously, his wife suffered the same, except that in her case four ribs were broken instead of three. It is understood that no effort at setting the bones has been attempted, but the effort has been to ease their condition as much as possible.

"WHAT IS SOCIALISM?"

"The next step was one which contemplated that, by combination, better results could be obtained, and so a more fortunate workman would build a workshop, provide tools and hire handicraftsmen for wages to do their work for him. Thus enter the Capitalist, who at once proceed to exchange social products for private profit, putting into his own purse the entire sum received for a workman's toil, less only the cost of the raw material, the share of the investments on the machines and the wages of the workmen. Being enabled by combination to turn out a better product at less cost, he had soon begun to crowd out the individual handicraftsman to the wall and then to life him over the wall and then to lift him over the wall was the formation of a new class, the wage-earning class, so that, as the system grew, the men ceased to be the slaves of the soil and became the slaves of the tools, while the real masters ceased to be the owners of land and became the owners of workmen and working-tools. In other words, there was here started the system that the Socialist calls Wage Slavery.

"In very much this way event moved slowly along until the latter portion of the seventeenth century but then the growth of trade and the development of colonial dependence resulted in a series of inventions which appeared with such appalling speed that labor conditions, unable suddenly to adapt themselves to the new order, suffered more severely than they had done since the rise of the Capitalistic system." Machine, for weaving ribbons, the spinning jenny, water-power spinning machines, and others, made it possible for a child to do more work and better work than several men could do by hand. "At once thousands of laborers found themselves without means of support; small manufacturers, unable to purchase the new means of production, were forced by the legions back into the already so hideous, overcrowded ranks of the workers; the old personal relationship between employer and employee almost entirely vanished, and, until the former workmen were compelled to send their sons and daughters to the factories for the support of the family, armies of children, not infrequently defective of mind and certain soon to become defective of body, were brought from the public work-house, and set, amid the most admiral conditions, to the newly-created tasks.

"Nor was that all. The struggle to work within the working class was soon paralleled by an equally bitter struggle for pre-eminence among the employers. Competition became the single rule of production, and Capitalism entered upon its second period the period in which Competition was universally believed to be the life of trade.

"The third, and what the Socialists considers as the last stage of Capitalism, is one well within the persona observation of every reader of this book. Here again the strong conquered the weak; the great crowded the small; the big swallowed the little. The manufacturers re-discovered the truth that better work could be more cheaply done by joining forces and where there were a hundred factories, engaged in the production of the same article, twenty-five, by combining under a single head, could and did very shortly force the remaining seventy-five out of the running. It that twenty-five, there logically followed a similar process of elimination, and the next step was the realization of the newly-born theory that a combination of various industries must be as successful in the general field of trade as combination of various branches of the same industry has just been within their own special limits. Competition was the parent of Combination, and Combination was now able to bring several industries under a single head."

MORE PROGRESS IN REMOVING THE BILL-BOARD NUISANCE.

In addition to the growing public sentiment against the bill-board nuisance, which is being created by the American Civic association, a more concrete form of extinction has been put into operation. Six years ago St. Louis, Missouri, passed an ordinance defining how and of what materials bill-boards should be built, limiting their size and ordering the demolition of all not conforming to the regulation. The validity of the law being questioned, it has finally been sustained by the supreme court, which says, in support of its opinion, that this form of advertising "may not only be regulated and controlled, but may be entirely suppressed for the public good under the police power of the state."

Ordinarily, bill-boards have been opposed because of offences to good taste, but there is also an element of danger in the form of fires, and in many cases they have helped to conceal practices that were offences to decency and morals.

Leslie's Weekly, commenting on this says: "St. Louis has shown what any city can do to protect itself against this nuisance, and the keeping as a nation of the ordinance, its spirit and purpose, as sustained by the supreme court of Missouri, should help other cities to follow the example of the metropolis of the southwest."

And the same journal gives elsewhere information of activities against the bill-board nuisance down east. It says: "Anyone in the state of New York may remove or destroy advertisements on public highways. The Ormrod bill, signed by Governor Dix, provides that anyone who may place an advertisement on any stone, tree, fence, stump, pole, danger-sign, danger signal, guide sign, guide-post, bill-board, building or other structure within the limits of the public highway is guilty of a misdemeanor, and a recent effect of the measure is found in the further provision that any such advertisement 'may be torn down, removed or destroyed by anyone.'"

Every citizen should accept the privilege of helping to clear our highways of this abuse. In Massachusetts, where they have had a similar law for some time, motorists have rendered valuable services of this kind. The municipal art society, in connection with other civic associations, is working on a bill which will impose a tax on all advertising signs, whether on public or private grounds. This will admirably supplement the Ormrod measure.

Summer School of Practical Agriculture.

By R. S. SHAW,
Dean of Michigan Agricultural College.

Agricultural Students at M. A. C. Constructing a Tile Drain.

THE first regular organized summer school of practical agriculture was opened at the Michigan Agricultural college, June, 1911, and continued throughout the ensuing four weeks. This course is intended to train the hands properly so far as such operations as follows, under the direction of a competent instructor, viz.: Fitting and operation of haying and harvesting tools and machinery, the same being true in the case of all implements involved in the cultivation of farm and horticultural crops. Each student was required to take part in every operation involved in farm drainage, the same being true of fencing. In addition to this, training was given in the feeding, care and management of poultry, hogs, sheep, beef cattle, dairy cattle and horses. In fact, the student was required to put the hand to every operation in progress at this season of the year.

Great care was exercised in the directions given. A student sent to mow out fence corners with a scythe was required first to grind, hang and whet the scythe and was then instructed how to take hold properly, swing and do the work easiest and most efficiently.

This training is a prerequisite to the four-year course and must be procured in this school or elsewhere before graduation. The work is not required of a young man properly trained on a good Michigan farm. A boy may acquire this experience during summer vacations on well operated farms, but as a rule he is not given an opportunity to experience a variety of work, as days in succession are spent in the hay loft mowing back hay or pitching bundles of grain.

It seems desirable to provide for this training in a special manner aside from the regular course, the experiences of the individual students being so greatly varied. An investigation a year or more ago showed that over 65 per cent of the young men enrolled in the agricultural and forestry courses came from the villages, towns and cities.

The regular agricultural course presents an abundance of practical work not usually acquired on the farm, such as blacksmithing, carpentry, operation of engines and farm machinery, as well as farm construction, including concrete work such as construction of foundations, walks, tanks, troughs, posts, etc. In addition to this the student is given work in installation of water systems, pipe fitting, plumbing, building designs and planning of farm conveniences generally.

Agriculture in the Rural Schools.

By W. H. FRENCH,
Of the Michigan Agricultural College.

High School Class in Raspberry Patch at North Adams, Michigan.

WE are coming more and more to recognize the fact that the public schools must be brought into closer relationship with the life of today. The courses of study need some modifications and teachers need broader and better training. They need training particularly in those subjects which constitute the dominant interests of the community.

For the rural schools there is abundance of natural material with which to supplement the text book work in all subjects. Many teachers have been giving successful instruction in nature study and thus widening the child's view of education and at the same time giving him a fund of information which will always be usable.

In many of our cities school gardens are becoming a popular feature of school work. The educational results are clearly to be seen, and we can judge with considerable certainty that the future effects will be equally valuable.

In most instances it will be found best for the teacher to select some projects which she has mastered and teach them to the children and after these another one, and so on. The teacher may call to her assistance some expert farmer of the community who will be glad to render assistance, both to the teacher and to the children. The farmer who assists, for instance, can give a demonstration of the formalin treatment of potatoes, to prevent scab, and these potatoes, when treated, may be planted by the children.

The testing of seed corn or other grains for the farm home can easily be worked out and be of assistance to the children and to the farmers as well.

The wise parent in each community will see to it that children are given plots of ground at home, the products of which become their own, or the boy may be given the care and inspection and products of a certain cow. All these things will help the child to discover whether he is adapted to agricultural work and will assist in solving the educational problem as well as the vocational problem of the home.

If the parent and teacher will unite in assisting the child to discover what he likes to do, they will give to the child an end or purpose in life, the value of which cannot be estimated.

Wild Strawberries.
Strawberries have improved very much in flavor since the fifteenth century. Until then the only strawberries eaten were wild strawberries of a kind which would never find a market nowadays. By 1481, however, they were beginning to be cultivated for Hollands records under that date a particularly fine crop grown by the Bishop of Ely in the grounds of his palace, now covered by Hatton Garden.

He quotes the Duke of Gloucester as saying to the Bishop, "My lord, you have very good strawberries in your garden in Holborn. I require you to let us have a mess of them." This speech was copied almost verbatim by Shakespeare in "Richard III." Still even the Bishop's fruit would not be much to modern connoisseurs for the garden strawberries at that period were only transplanted wildlings, the plants being sold at about 4d. a bushel.—London Chronicle.

Some Points For Fathers.
Must be tactfully wary of criticism.
Must never laugh at the questions of his child; may laugh with him, but never at him.
Must give his child high standards, for by their aid will be best able to control and understand himself.
Must study his children individually, for the same child who shrinks from coercion and advice will often respond instantly to gentleness, wisdom and example.

Baby's Sleeves.
Most mothers tie up their baby's sleeves with ribbon. A prettier way (and one that saves the trouble of ironing out the ribbons) is to purchase two small strings of white or gilt beads and two medium sized pearl buttons. Fasten one button on each sleeve, slip a string of beads over it and fasten at the shoulder with a baby pin. The effect is charming—and it costs about 25 cents altogether.

Correct Carriage.
Walking or standing with the knees crooked is merely a bad habit in a child, and it must be corrected with incessant reminders, and an inclination toward round shoulders can be treated to a great extent in the same manner.

Give the child's vanity a boost by telling it to go and look in the glass when it is walking in these ways and after awhile merely saying the word "glass" will be a reminder of the misconduct. But if a physical weakness attends the trick of dropping the shoulders over go to the children's corset department in any big store, purchase a linen brace and make the child wear it until it gets over the trick.

Nourishing food, fresh air and soothing baths are required even more than orthopedic boots and braces in the correction of any youthful trouble. If the child is not properly fed and sleeps in a room with bad air the nerves are poisoned and the muscles starved, and the trouble shows itself in the weakest place. Weak ankles, concave chests, rickets and other disagreeable signs in little bodies all mean that nature is being abused in some way.

Hints For Mothers.
Rub wasp and bee stings with a slice of raw onion.
Bouncing the baby is more apt to nauseate than to soothe him.
Keep a mosquito netting over the baby's carriage when he sleeps out of doors.
Hot water applied to a bleeding cut will usually stop the flow of blood quickly.
Don't wake the baby. Hang a placard with these words printed in large letters over his bed.
A white lining in the hood of a baby's carriage causes a white glare which injures his eyes.
If the baby gets sunburned wash the burned places with warm sweet milk, following with a bath in clear warm water.
A baby allowed to roll upon the floor will creep and walk more quickly than one which is held or tied in a carriage.
During the hot weather rub the children's shoes with a little vasoline. The shoes will last longer, look better and stay soft.

Baby's Basket.
If you have a strong clothes basket or the bottom of an old baby buggy have the carpenter make four stout wooden legs the height desired. Put casters on the ends of the each and secure with screws.
Fasten the legs to the four corners of the basket with screws through a thin board bottom slightly smaller all around than the bottom of the basket. If the basket has a wooden bottom no other board is needed.
Finish by tacking strips of thin board two inches wide around the top of the legs close to the basket for strength. Paint this with white enamel paint or in colors if liked better.
Two or three hoops fastened to the inside of the basket so as to support a covering of mosquito netting will insure immunity from the pestiferous fly.

Points for Mothers

For Girls.
Figure out a reasonable monthly or yearly allowance for the personal use of the daughter of the family and after increasing this to a certain amount encourage her to try to save the amount added as a reserve fund.

See that a girl has all possible experience in the judicious expenditure of the money necessary for her own personal belongings and for household use. Let her furnish the family table for a month and see if she can give the improved service at less than the usual expense.

A mother should train her daughter carefully in the performance of all kinds of home work, having in mind, of course, her mental and spiritual needs. Thus teach her to respect both work and workers and to know that the world's wealth is produced chiefly by means of labor.

Teach a girl to save not merely for future use, but for future good. It is agreed among men that one of the finest of all womanly qualities is unselfishness; that the sweetest and best in her nature is shown forth in her sacrifice and devotion in behalf of others, especially her own dependent children.

Hot water applied to a bleeding cut will usually stop the flow of blood quickly.
Don't wake the baby. Hang a placard with these words printed in large letters over his bed.
A white lining in the hood of a baby's carriage causes a white glare which injures his eyes.
If the baby gets sunburned wash the burned places with warm sweet milk, following with a bath in clear warm water.
A baby allowed to roll upon the floor will creep and walk more quickly than one which is held or tied in a carriage.
During the hot weather rub the children's shoes with a little vasoline. The shoes will last longer, look better and stay soft.

Baby's Basket.
If you have a strong clothes basket or the bottom of an old baby buggy have the carpenter make four stout wooden legs the height desired. Put casters on the ends of the each and secure with screws.
Fasten the legs to the four corners of the basket with screws through a thin board bottom slightly smaller all around than the bottom of the basket. If the basket has a wooden bottom no other board is needed.
Finish by tacking strips of thin board two inches wide around the top of the legs close to the basket for strength. Paint this with white enamel paint or in colors if liked better.
Two or three hoops fastened to the inside of the basket so as to support a covering of mosquito netting will insure immunity from the pestiferous fly.

Wild Strawberries.
Strawberries have improved very much in flavor since the fifteenth century. Until then the only strawberries eaten were wild strawberries of a kind which would never find a market nowadays. By 1481, however, they were beginning to be cultivated for Hollands records under that date a particularly fine crop grown by the Bishop of Ely in the grounds of his palace, now covered by Hatton Garden.

He quotes the Duke of Gloucester as saying to the Bishop, "My lord, you have very good strawberries in your garden in Holborn. I require you to let us have a mess of them." This speech was copied almost verbatim by Shakespeare in "Richard III." Still even the Bishop's fruit would not be much to modern connoisseurs for the garden strawberries at that period were only transplanted wildlings, the plants being sold at about 4d. a bushel.—London Chronicle.

Some Points For Fathers.
Must be tactfully wary of criticism.
Must never laugh at the questions of his child; may laugh with him, but never at him.
Must give his child high standards, for by their aid will be best able to control and understand himself.
Must study his children individually, for the same child who shrinks from coercion and advice will often respond instantly to gentleness, wisdom and example.

Baby's Sleeves.
Most mothers tie up their baby's sleeves with ribbon. A prettier way (and one that saves the trouble of ironing out the ribbons) is to purchase two small strings of white or gilt beads and two medium sized pearl buttons. Fasten one button on each sleeve, slip a string of beads over it and fasten at the shoulder with a baby pin. The effect is charming—and it costs about 25 cents altogether.

Correct Carriage.
Walking or standing with the knees crooked is merely a bad habit in a child, and it must be corrected with incessant reminders, and an inclination toward round shoulders can be treated to a great extent in the same manner.

Give the child's vanity a boost by telling it to go and look in the glass when it is walking in these ways and after awhile merely saying the word "glass" will be a reminder of the misconduct. But if a physical weakness attends the trick of dropping the shoulders over go to the children's corset department in any big store, purchase a linen brace and make the child wear it until it gets over the trick.

Nourishing food, fresh air and soothing baths are required even more than orthopedic boots and braces in the correction of any youthful trouble. If the child is not properly fed and sleeps in a room with bad air the nerves are poisoned and the muscles starved, and the trouble shows itself in the weakest place. Weak ankles, concave chests, rickets and other disagreeable signs in little bodies all mean that nature is being abused in some way.

Hints For Mothers.
Rub wasp and bee stings with a slice of raw onion.
Bouncing the baby is more apt to nauseate than to soothe him.
Keep a mosquito netting over the baby's carriage when he sleeps out of doors.

Well Remembered.

Mrs. Mary Fifley, 421 Hamilton St., is still reading birthday post cards. Her birthday was last Saturday, but the celebration is not all over yet it seems. The ladies of the M. E. church assembled at her home Saturday and after a pleasant social hour a delicious supper was served. The event marked her 79th birth anniversary. Owing to illness Rev. Leeson was unable to be present but he sent a pleasing letter which was read during the afternoon.

A NEW LEG OR ARM.

No Longer Necessary to Plod on Crutches—Affliction Alleviated.

The rapid advancement of science and discovery is notably improving the earthly lot of humanity. Inconveniences from which our grandparents suffered need not annoy us. And not alone the wealthy, but all classes are now benefited. In no case is this fact more strikingly illustrated than in the loss of an arm or leg. It is no longer necessary to plod along painfully on crutches. Artificial limbs are now made to rival the natural members, and at prices within the reach of everyone.

The longest established and best known manufacturer of artificial limbs in Michigan is Wm. T. Simpson, 112 and 114 Bates street, corner of Congress street (one block east of the City Hall), Detroit. Mr. Simpson has the advantage of years of experience in which he has followed up every improvement in his line. He can give the names of hundreds of people in Michigan and throughout the West whose afflictions he has been the means of alleviating, and who will certify to the thoroughly satisfactory character of his dealings with them. His prices are low and his terms of payment liberal. He will mail descriptive catalogues on request, and to the veterans of our wars who need a new leg or arm he will send (free) blanks for mailing applications for Government orders for limbs and transportation or commutation therefor.

PRES. SIMON SOON TO LEAVE HIS COUNTRY

Port Au Prince, Haiti, August 2.—The capitol has been completely invested by revolutionists. It is probable they will refuse a delay of three days asked by President Simon to effect plans to secure the capitol from pillage and will enter the city immediately. It is probable also that President Simon, who has consented to leave the country, will be obliged to embark tomorrow for some foreign port.

There are sufficient soldiers in the capitol at present to maintain order, and the people here feel safe. The French, British, German and Cuban ministers, who went out today to confer with the revolutionary commanders and exact from them a promise that Port Au Prince will be occupied without disorder, have not yet returned.

THINGS NOT THAT WAY UP HERE IN MICHIGAN

San Antonio, Texas, Aug. 2.—Four years ago, Henry Niccum residing in the vicinity of Toluca, Illinois, came to Texas with a company of land seekers and during his trip spent a day at San Marcos. While at San Marcos, Mr. Niccum left his umbrella hanging on a hat-rack in a hotel. A few days ago, he visited San Marcos again and while sitting in the office of the same hotel noticed an umbrella hanging on the hat-rack. Approaching the clerk he said: "Whose umbrella is that?" The clerk, of course, did not know. "Well," said Niccum, "I think that is my umbrella that I left here four years ago. If it is, it has a home-made handle of sassafras." Examination proved the umbrella to be the property of Mr. Niccum. According to the statement of the clerk it had been hanging on the hat-rack for the past four years.

Machine to Fill Knot Holes.

Boxes containing knot holes are not salable, and if some localities the lumber used for the box shooks is full of such blemishes, with the result that 20 per cent. of the total board footage has to be discarded. A machine invented by a Californian, saws out the knot or the section containing the knot hole, producing holes of uniform size. The same machine also saws the plugs for the holes, the work being done by two small hand saws. The plugs are cut from waste blocks of a thickness that corresponds with that of the boards to be plugged. The plugs, being at slightly larger than the holes made for them, fit snugly, and are held firmly in place by small crimping nails, which leave both the inner and outer surfaces perfectly flush and smooth.—Popular Magazine.

The Wheel Track to Eternity.

Time is the most important thing in human life—for what is joy after its departure?—and the most consolatory—for pain when time has fled, is no more. The wheel track in which we roll on towards eternity, which conduces us to the incomprehensible. There is a perfecting power connected with its progress, and this operates upon us the more beneficially when we duly estimate it, listen to its voice, and do not waste it, but regard it as the highest infinite good in which all finite things are resolved.—Wilhelm von Humboldt.

The Optimist's Corner Daily helps to Health and Happiness

By GEORGE F. BUTLER, A. M., M. D.

The could-be-made model wives have waked up to the fact that here is some work of importance to do outside the four walls of home. They have watched mother, or helped her just enough to know, in the one case that idleness is pure idleness; in the other that it is insipid. They have discovered that the same ability, the same light, the same desire to be independent, to accomplish ends, to become living part of a living world, as those who would tie them hand and foot to what is at best a hard task—that of keeping and making the home. That those who surrender themselves to this life of home-making are doing the greatest good in the world cannot be denied, for it is the way of love, sacrifice and absolute usefulness. But especially in the case of those whose incomes are weighed in the scales of war, and the where-withal—how great the warning to those who are tempted to do likewise. And it seems to me at times that love is not kind to them, lead them as it does from the great open of Freedom to the martyrdom of Consecration. It blinds them but to inflict, and it is, beautifully and pathetically sad. All praise to her who suffers, endures, is braved is glad in her chosen life. She who chooses the storehouse office or a profession is well, but she who chooses to be a wife and mother is best. Serving the love, pity, sympathy, praise, help and appreciation of All Humanity. Her works beyond our realization. Think it over.
